

AMEENA SOLIMAN

Player Personnel Coordinator

Philadelphia Eagles

Ameena Soliman originally joined the Philadelphia Eagles' scouting department as a player personnel intern in 2018 and was elevated to player personnel coordinator during the 2019 offseason.

Soliman is responsible for executing evaluative and administrative tasks with both the pro and college scouting staffs, including pro scouting advances, free agency evaluation, and draft preparation. She also provides support to the football operations department.

In 2020, Soliman was named a Scott Pioli & Family Fund recipient. The annual grant aims to promote the development, education and training of aspiring female football coaches and scouts who are pursuing careers in collegiate or professional football.

Prior to joining the Eagles, Soliman worked as a player personnel assistant with the NFL league office from 2017-18. In addition, Soliman served as a football operations and recruiting graduate assistant with Temple University during the 2017 season.

A native of Yardley, PA, Soliman graduated Summa Cum Laude with an undergraduate degree in finance and marketing and also earned a master's degree in sports business from Temple.
